

HOW IS IT GOING?

Rutgers University Writing Centers
Plangere Writing Center ♦ Livingston Writing Center ♦ Douglass/Cook Writing Center

You have been working for several weeks with your tutor and you are writing for one or more of your classes. At this point it may be helpful for you to take stock of the semester so far, tell your tutor about it, and let your tutor know where you want to go from here. Please answer as many of the following questions as you can. Be specific in your answers.

What are your goals at this point in your writing course?

What are your goals at this point in your tutoring sessions?

What would you like to continue working on with your tutor?

What parts of your work in the class, in your tutoring sessions and at home have helped you make progress and accomplish some of your goals?

What would you like to work on in a different way?

How do you feel about your reading now? Are there certain approaches to reading that are becoming more fruitful? Have you altered your approach to reading in any way?

How do you feel about your writing now? Are you doing new things now as you write? Are certain practices working for you? Are you becoming a different sort of writer?

Have you visited the classroom teacher during office hours? What questions would you ask the classroom teacher if you could?

What questions would you ask your tutor now?